

Stefan 'Grief' Travers

For years the secretive Eastern Bloc operative codenamed Grief upset the schemes of western governments on both sides of the Iron Curtain. Little is known of this individual, and what information there is is securely held in the files of the ultra-secret Department X.

What is known is that Stefan Travers (possibly an alias) now works solo – after a spectacular run-in with Hugo Solomon on board a Chinese cargo ship in Odessa left him with a ruined left eye. His hatred for Solomon is legendary, and Travers is not above compromising a mission to get even with his nemesis if he is within striking distance. For such an exemplary and feared agent this is surely his only weakness.

Unique Effects

Solo Operative

Travers is a highly trained self sufficient agent with no compunction about killing those who get in his way. He can activate without needing an activation marker and can reroll any one dice affecting him, up to twice per turn, in the same manner as Luck points. Travers may not use his Morale to make Shaken or Wiped Out Morale tests.

Kill Solomon!

Such is his hatred of the head of Department X, Travers must always attempt to strike Hugo Solomon, if he is within range. If he is close enough to get one or more melee attacks in, Travers must move towards Solomon if he not already in base contact and engage him. If he is within weapon range, he must take the shot if he has a chance to hit. If both options are open, Travers' player must choose at least one.

Attacks

Weapon	Range	Hit	Str	Notes
Brawl	Melee	3+	4	Stuns

Travers can choose up to 2 additional Basic or Military attacks, at 3+ to hit, by adding the weapons rating to Traver's own ratings.
